

ABSTRACT

An improved method and process of golf club manufacture is presented where some or all the components of the clubs are squeeze-cast or metal injection molded from light-weight metals.

- 5 Components can be made of different metal alloys and then separately heat treated and then finally assembled by mechanical means.